Space-age shower saves water, money

A new shower design from NASA will prevent people from wasting water. The model is inspired from space stations, where astronauts have to recycle water. The new design saves water and money, too.

The system enables saving up to 90% of the water and energy savings up to 80%. It also increases comfort. All the used water is collected in the drain, analyzed, made perfectly clean and then reused.

The new shower design has been tested already in Sweden, where it has saved up to 100.000 liters of water in four months.

This machine could be used in the near future in places which use a lot of water like gyms and sports centers.
